COURSE DESCRIPTION:

In the Western tradition, rhetoric is said to have begun in the 5th century B.C.E. in Greece. Some of you may have heard of Plato and Aristotle. The latter wrote a book on the art of rhetoric, and is in many ways the basis for how writing gets taught in academia today. Further, the writing course as we know it was developed at Harvard in the late nineteenth century. One reason for developing such a course still holds forth today: students coming into the university cannot write—or so many (including teachers) will claim. Those coming to college in the 1900s were no longer just the elite few, but rather a boom in enrollments brought in students with different literacy skills. Thus, a placement exam was initiated and writing was linked to a canon of literature. As English A and B courses became filled with students, teachers were overwhelmed with three hundred themes a week to grade. During this time a few graduate programs developed that focused on writing and rhetoric.

To say that history repeats itself is an understatement. In the 1970s, the colleges in New York began open admissions, meaning that anyone—returning veterans, immigrants, non-native English speakers, adults— who wanted to enroll in college could. Once again, colleges found themselves trying to deal with the writing issues they saw in papers done by these “non-traditional” students. Composition studies became part of many more graduate programs.

Today we look at writing and a variety of rhetorics coming from many different spaces. Racial and ethnic groups claim and perform their own rhetorics, and Aristotle now must share the stage. Feminist Rhetorics, Queer Studies, and Disability Studies scholars are all contributing to the discussions of whose writing counts. There are embodied rhetorics, visual rhetorics, performance rhetorics and creative writing, business writing, professional writing, museum rhetorics, technical writing, digital rhetorics, cultural rhetorics—and more. Certainly, today’s technology has brought changes to the writing classroom that fascinates and frustrates teachers. Because of social media, some claim that students are writing much more than they did in the past, and others lament the effects texting is having on a student’s ability to write a paper in standard written English (SWE). Even SWE is a complicated issues. To me, it is intellectually stimulating to engage in allthese theories and discussions.

This course serves as an introduction to the Writing and Writing Studies Concentration in the English major. During the course you will not only be learning about the histories and theories, but you will also spend some time paying attention to your own writing practices—how you develop ideas, compose, draft, revise, challenge, edit and so on. You will also get a chance to explore different aspects of writing and what can potentially be a career in writing. While it will be impossible to cover everything in this one course, I hope to at least help you experience the vibrant field of writing and writing studies as well as provide you with an avenue to pursue through English Studies.

Our Objectives:

Our goals and objectives are, but not limited to, the following:

By the end of the course, student will have

- Developed a strong understanding of what constitutes writing and writing studies;
- Begun the process of becoming a professional rather than student writer through interrogating your process and practice of writing;
- Begun to understand the kinds of research one does in composition and rhetoric;
- Begun to develop a portfolio that can be used as you continue to explore the field of writing and writing studies.

What you need for this class

- There will be several Course Readings will be posted to a website: www.joycerain.com which may be printed out by you or downloaded to a tablet or laptop to bring to class. In class, this should be the only use of your device.
- A BSU email account which you will check frequently for information
- A notebook or other means of taking notes

Class Assignments and Projects:

Reader's Response: Readings are one of the most important aspects of this class. If you do not do the reading, you will have little to contribute. These responses will all be the jumping off point for most of our discussions. For each set of readings, you are responsible to write 500 words which demonstrates that you have read all the readings assigned completely (not just the first page). First, you should provide a concise summary with key points of what we are reading. Second, provide a reaction that engages with the argument(s) made by the author. Consider what the reading is about, what your reactions are to the author, what else have you read that connects to this piece, or how this reading is relevant to your experiences. In the end, this is informal writing in the sense that you don't need to develop a thesis, but you do need to apply your critical literacy skills. I will collect these and spec grade them (see handout on spec grading), and you will include them in your portfolios.

WWSBlog: As part of this course, we will all participate in a class blog. We will take turns posting, but before we do, we will need to decide what the blog will be about. That decision will take place during our second class meeting.

Composition Rhetoric Studies: This project requires you to map out an area in composition rhetoric that has you curious. This can be one of the following (but not limited to): writing instruction (at various levels of schooling), rhetorical analysis, histories and policies of literacy and literacy instruction, second-language writing, "alternative" rhetorics, gatekeeping in academic writing, feminist rhetorics, queer rhetorics, writing across the curriculum, cultural rhetorics, ...and more. (See Keywords in Composition Studies for more ideas).

You will not be writing an entire paper, but rather doing research to find 8-10 scholarly articles and annotate them (we will discuss how in class). You will then write a proposal for a research project and give a 5-minute summary of it in class. We will have time to work on pieces of the assignment in class. This project will be due in its final form in your mid-term portfolio.

Writing as Art: For this project, you will conduct a similar writing experience from "Thirteen Ways of Looking at an Egg." Each of you will be given a yet-to-be-determined object which you will reflect on and write about culminating in a poem, short creative nonfiction or fiction piece, or other artful writing. This assignment calls for you to hand in all reflective writing about our object along with the final creative piece in your midterm portfolio.

Writing in the Professions: For this project, you will be working in teams (even though that can be difficult) to create one of the following, the subject of which needs to be run by me before you start. You will also create a poster to present at the STARS Symposium:

- ❖ A Public Service Announcement Campaign which includes multi-genre/multimodal materials. Your materials must be in 4-5 different forms, but contain the same message.

This project allows you to prepare some message that will be beneficial to the public and create 4-5 forms of broadcasting it. An example would be a campaign on healthy eating where you would create a newsletter, a brochure, a logo for a t-shirt and water bottle, and a bookmark with healthy eating tips.

- ❖ Marketing and instruction materials for a new electronic device. Your device can be one that is already in play, but your materials must take on a new direction. Use 4-5 different materials.

This project allows you to develop a new electronic device or version of an existing one. You then creating advertising and instructions for it. An example would be a new version of a smartphone where you would create an image of the design, brief instructions of the features, a full-page ad for a magazine, and a you-tube video or radio advertisement or a brochure.

- ❖ A print and e-magazine on a subject of your choice (just no pornography). Create 4-5 layouts.

This project allows you to develop a magazine on a subject of your choice featuring 4-5 layouts. An example would be a health magazine which has a short article on the benefits of walking, a new diet, an exercise routine, and an advertisement for running shoes. Your magazine should have a cover and table of contents.

- ❖ A journalistic series which included visuals and hyperlinks. Use 4-5 different entries.

This project allows you to develop a journalistic series with inserted pictures and hyperlinks to help readers understand concepts or history, etc. An example would be a series on four areas of access to water and can include a short piece on Flint, Michigan, a piece on the Dakota Pipeline, a piece on river pollution, and a piece on clean-up of water. Embedded in these are links to further the reader's understanding.

We will discuss further options and details. You will also have time to work on this project in class. This project will be due in its final form with your final portfolio.

Portfolios: At both the mid-semester and at semester's end, you'll submit a portfolio of your work for me to read, critique, and grade. The mid-semester portfolio must contain an Introduction or cover piece; the pieces you worked on in the first half of the semester: your CR assignment and your WA assignment as well your Reader's Responses. The final portfolio must contain an Introduction or cover piece the pieces you worked on in the second half of the semester: your response to the tutoring session, and your PW assignment as well your Reader's Responses.

Your cover pieces for each portfolio (ideally 3-4pages) should critically reflect on the work you have been doing and how this work informs you about Writing and Writing Studies. Talk specifically about readings, your reactions, your interactions, and your engagement. What have you learned? What surprised you and why? Talk about the assignments and how they help you understand this area of Writing Studies. In the final portfolio discuss your future in Writing and Writing Studies.

Attendance, Academic Honesty, and Other Suggestions

1. In Native communities, we talk about the four Rs: Reverence, Reciprocity, Respect, and Responsibility. I make every attempt to conduct my personal and professional life under these four Rs. I hold great admiration for each of you and for the work we will do together. We are in a space of sharing gifts of learning with one another. As with any endeavor, there are responsibilities that we take on and expectations that need to be fulfilled. It goes without saying that respectful behavior is expected from all of us. Respecting one another includes coming to class on time and prepared as well as being present and engaging in deep listening as well as contributing. While we may disagree, and I hope we will, there are ways to challenge and ask difficult questions in ways that do not devalue anyone in the room.
2. You must come to class regularly and on time and being present in class. Being in class demonstrates your responsibility to your studies and your peers. While things happen such as illness, car troubles, unplanned events, it is to your benefit to make every class. If something serious happens let me know, so you keep up with the work. However, if it seems that you just are not taking the class seriously, your grade will be affected. Thus, three or more absences (equally 1.5 weeks of class) means you should not expect to pass the course. Please notify me on the day you are absent by phone or email (listed at the top of this document). When absent, you must bring documentation such as a doctor's note. If you are absent, you are responsible for getting and completing the assignment. Further, two times late equals one absence. If you are late, enter and take your seat without disrupting the class. Likewise, if you must leave class to use the facilities, do so without interrupting. Being late on a consistent basis and/or continually leaving the classroom will bring down your grade
3. Use of Electronic Devices: Sometimes it seems we must be available to others 24/7, which leaves no time for anything else. Yet this "on-call status" does not allow for us to be attentive to other things. While I may not say anything to you, I (and other students) do take note of your attentiveness in class. In this class cell phone use is only for emergencies—put them on silence and keep them out of sight. Likewise, while you may bring laptops or other devices to class, they should be used only for class-related tasks. Websurfing, viewing Facebook and other social media, or checking email are not part of the work at hand. Finally, earphones, unless they are for purposes of hearing-impaired students, are not to be in your ears. I do not care to waste my time and the time of the class monitoring your use of electronic devices. Your inappropriate use of such devices is disrespectful to me and to your peers; violation of this policy will result in your being marked absent for the class.

4. Academic Dishonesty and Plagiarism— Plagiarism—we all know that this is intellectual theft. Bottom line, don't do it. It's a serious offense that could not only jeopardize your grade, but has other serious consequences. This is a link to BSU's Academic Integrity Policy:
<http://catalog.bridgew.edu/content.php?catoid=10&navoid=970>
5. Participation: Attendance and participation are not the same things. Participation means that you are physically, mentally, and vocally present in class. Much of our work is based on work you have done in your reading responses or through your observations. You should come to class prepared and ready to work. Each person should respond thoughtfully and carefully to the discussion. Participation is a major player in your final grade, so I urge you to fully engage in the class.
6. Feel challenged—While the work load is heavy at times, there is still so much more to contribute. If you find something that looks interesting, bring it in or discuss it in your responses. Speak and ask questions in class. Do your homework and come to class prepared to work. While it seems like a lot, stick with it. Enjoy the learning, work hard at it, and open yourself to thinking in challenging ways.
7. Special Accommodations: Any student who needs special accommodations due to a documented disability must register with the Disability Resources Office in the Academic Achievement Center (Maxwell Library, ground floor). A letter will be provided for you which needs to be delivered to me before the add/drop period. At that time, we can discuss your specific needs.
8. The Writing Studio and Second Language Services are also located in the AAC
9. Talk to me—I make myself available in multiple ways. My office hours are listed at the top of the syllabus and I can always find other times to meet with you. Let me know if there are any issues before they grow. Please do not feel intimidated by my “rules” or the course materials; they are designed to help you become a stronger reader, writer and learner. I am also interested in what you have to say as a member of our classroom community; I am involved in helping you say what you want in the context of your assignments and will respectfully respond to your work.
10. Have a sense of humor.
11. Be creative. Take risks.

Evaluating Your Work

I will not be grading individual pieces for this class, but I will be making comments on them. Your grade for this course will be based on your two portfolios—one at mid-term and one at the semester's end. While not receiving grades on individual projects can be frustrating, a portfolio system offers room for you to develop as a writer. Your two letter grades for these portfolios include

- Meeting all the requirements in each project and for the portfolio;
- Assessing the quality of your written work, including your thoughtful revisions;
- The quality of your effort in class, in workshops, in class discussions, in general;
- How you demonstrate your willingness to try new things, think in new ways, and explore different perspectives.

Breakdown of assessment percentages:

Participation	10%
Reader's Response	15%
WWSBlog	10%
Writing in the Professions	15%
Writing Studies	15%
Writing as Art	15%
Two Portfolios	20%

You should, from your efforts and my comments, know how you are doing in the class. At any time during the semester you are unsure, come speak with me.

Tentative Schedule (Like any piece of writing, this is a draft and will undergo revision.)

Note: It is your responsibility to read materials before coming to class and to prepare any assignments.

WEEK 1: January 23

W We meet for the first time today, so introductions are necessary. For this introduction, give a social media profile.

Discuss: What is this class about? What should this class be about?
